sent me into a doughnut-induced tizzy. As someone who is continually on the search for the best deep-fried high around, I had to make my way to this Little

While dinner here is a dimly lit affair showcasing the traditional cuisines of Singapore and Vietnam, weekend brunch brings a well-edited menu of Asian and American breakfast staples like congee and French toast. The Kaya

The dough was soft, sweet, and fried just right. It came neatly coated in a pitch perfect coconut- and pandan-flavored glaze, and I love how the pale green topping strikes a distinctly tropical note reminiscent of Southeast Asian desserts. What really sealed the doughnut deal were the strategically sprinkled flecks of fleur de sel atop the ring; they proved to be the perfect foil
