Vietnamese Eats

by Amy Sherman

It's hard for me to believe it, but my month long adventure in Vietnam was almost one year ago. Keeping my memories fresh are a number of recent posts that describe Vietnamese food and cooking. It may not scream Christmas or Hannukah, but when the weather gets chilly I crave crispy, chewy, banh mi sandwiches, steaming bowls of pho and the vibrant flavors and spices of Vietnam...

Andrea at Viet World Kitchen shares banh mi incarnations, variations on a most fantastic sandwich.

Cathy of Gastronomy reports from Saigon and her reviews and photos from restaurants around town are seriously making me hungry.

Brys over at CookThink, takes on a very involved recipe for Pho.

Finally a street specialty I didn't try in Vietnam, banh mi doner kebab.

Even as the weather turns cold, I also crave the food that I ate in Viet Nam. I recently posted my recipe for Ph Bò here:
